EXHIBITORS:
BARBARA IPSICS AND LILLA SZÁSZ

Lilla Szász and Barbara Ipsics were dealing with similar questions in the past years independently of one another.

One started out from discovering incomplete family images and moving on to investigate them and thus understanding her life's determining key women figures. The other processes the pains of her ended relationship in a flat of an unknown elderly woman surrounded by her past spaces and objects.

For both artists it is the transition space between personal and fictive where they could observe their lives from a new and genuine perspective.

Szász and Ipsics raise their questions through the genre of self-portrait, where the questions about oneself can have many different and various answers. These are questions like where the borders are between intimacy and identity, what do we expect from our internal desires and what clues our fictional role plays can provide. The two projects were formed and met because of and due to these questions.
